About FDP:

The goal of this groundbreaking Faculty Development Program (FDP) is to change educators from being passive observers into active Gender Equity Ambassadors. The curriculum emphasizes three main pillars: gender-sensitive education, objective mentoring, and institutional advocacy. This is because it acknowledges that academia frequently reflects society biases. Faculty will acquire the skills necessary to recognize microaggressions, adapt courses for inclusivity, and spearhead policy changes through interactive modules and case-based learning. The program establishes a long-lasting network of leaders committed to promoting a secure, equitable, and meritocratic atmosphere where gender never restricts intellectual or professional development by bridging the gap between theory and practice.

Vision

To transform academics into Gender Equity Ambassadors who support diversity through gender-responsive instruction and leadership. This curriculum enables educators to mentor diverse talent and include social justice into the academic core, guaranteeing that every student and colleague flourishes regardless of gender, by eliminating structural biases and creating an equitable campus atmosphere.

Mission

Our Mission is to give academics the resources they need to recognize and eradicate gender inequality in the classroom. We create a community of practice where educators actively promote structural change and empower the upcoming generation of diverse leaders by offering evidence-based training in inclusive teaching and equitable policy-making.
